David Bennett
Manager, Automotive Programs

David Bennett is the manager of automotive programs at AAA, where he is responsible for the development and implementation of auto buying initiatives for the association. In this position, he works in conjunction with AAA and CAA clubs to provide their members with programs and services that help ease the car-buying experience.

David regularly serves as an expert on purchasing vehicles and driving costs. He is frequently featured in national and regional media, including Wall Street Journal Radio, Good Housekeeping and NerdWallet. He also serves as the editor for AAA's new car and truck reviews.

David has more than 30 years of experience in the automotive industry. He joined AAA in 1986 as a vehicle diagnostic technician and held other positions managing AAA Approved Auto Repair and the Ford/AAA Student Auto Skills programs. In addition, David has served as a technical advisor for AAA's Making Sense of Car Care book.

David is a founding member of the Automotive Executives Association and sits on the Seminole State College of Florida Automotive Advisory Committee. He previously held the certification of ASE Master Automotive Technician.
